The fatality was not discovered till this morning. The body was sent to the Go-

Fon the second time the ministers of the Western powers have been admitted into the august presence of the Son of Heaven. The alrangements for the audience were not perhaps all that could be desired. The hall where it took placeis associated with the reception of tributary princes, and there may have been an arridre men connected with the negotiations that they had succeeded by skilful manouvring in giving to their puppet god-king a position superior to that of the other monarche and rulers of the world. Success in such petty artifices is peculiarly pleasant to the Chinese mind, and as a rule little harm is done by allowing them to enjoy it. One may be disposed to laugh at the disputes about the arrange - P & O. Co. ments of tables, the laying of papers and the filing in of the ambassadors, but one must put up with a little humbug when dealing with the Chinese. . They cannot Shire Line be expected to abandon their chorished superstitions in a day, and they have a peculiar respect even for the shadow. of observances. They offer their ; nds paper substitutes for valuable gifts and when the Emperor travels abroad the 'acreens which keen off the vulgaze are mostly make-believes. The foreign ministers have been blamed for not refusing to be received except on terms of unmistakeable equality, but we think they did well in not straining at overy nicety of detail. They have got the promise that a special hall is to be built for their reception, and their future action will likely depend on the alacrity with which this promise is fulfilled. The Emperor of China cannot be brought from the clouds to the cold material earth all at once. I is often a difficult task for superior men to support with equanimity the arrogance and pride of inferior men, but an attitude of quibt dignity will generally be found the best method of treatment. The representatives of the Great Powers, conscious of their strength, ought to be content if they are able to make small breaches in the wall of seclusion. It will crumble to pieces some day, but it is as well that the work should be done gradually. Chang Chi Tung and his foreign assistants are unconsciously pegging away at the foundations.

THE CAMPHOR MONOPOLY IN An outsider who visited Formosa would have great difficulty in forming an estimate of the character of the Governor, Liu Ming-chuan. In the North he would find that everyone praised the Governor as on energetic enlightoned administrator, propared to-break with Chinese ways. In the South he would find that almost everyone execrated Liu and held him to be a crafty Chinaman wedded to all the tricks and all rative study might lead to the opinion that His Excellency was a peculiar amalgam of composite stuff one meets in Ohina and which it is so difficult to bring within our concerned in the meantime about an anaare presented to us by the correspondents. The next stage arises from Dr Sinclair prosecuting the lad Boland before the Selangor Court, on a charge of making—aalse accusation or to that effect. Welman, the Chief Magistrate of Selaugor. was on the bench. At this trial it was brought out that Boland had alleged that while at or near Dr Sinclair's house, he had heard a woman's voice which he declared was that of Miss Savory, forbidding someone to enter her bedroom and demanding how that person dared to do so. Boland alleged that the voice which replied to the woman's voice was that of Dr Sinclair, and in substance he based on these alleged facts an accusation of impropriety against Dr. Sinclair. The trial was carried out in open court, among the other witnesses examined being the Resident of Selangor and Dr Sinclair's wife. The jury found Boland guilty and recommended him to mercy,

It was incorrect to say that Mr Welman was the magistrate: it was Berrington who presided at the trial and who inflicted a three years' sentence. It seems that the lad Boland first friends .- Milwaukee Journal. therefore is more quiet, but it is only a communicated his statement to the Resident, who sent him to the magistrate ; and that Boland then gave evidence before the coroner's jury who inquired into the deuth characteristic fashion the military officials, of Miss Savery. It was after the verdict fof the coroner's jury that Boland was tacked several defenceless villages in the tried before a jury for having given false

THE EXECUTION OF EYRAUD.

HE PERISHES WHILE CURSING CONSTANS. Paris. February 3 .- Michael Eyraud. niurderer of Notary B. Gouffe, was guillotined at 7.20 o'clock this morning. The date had been kept a profound secret, and the first that the citizens of the city knew of the guillotining was after it had taken place and Hyraud's body had been turned over to his friends. He met his fate with fortitude and resignation, and during the arrangement of the preliminaries he did not swince the slightest emotion. His conduct was that of the cold; cruel and reckless man of the world that his life proved him to have been. As he lived so he died.

As early as 2 o'clock this morning the customary parriers were erected upon the Place de la Rouquette. Shortly afterward two divisions of police and a detachment of the Garde Republican took possession of the place. The night was bitter cold. To make the scene more gloomy than usual a heavy, damp, cold fog hung over the city.

The cafes near the Place de la Rouquette were full of carousers, male and female, singley in maudlin tones a disgusting song having for its refrain, 'It is Evraud whom we must have ! it is his head which we must have. The scenes in some of the cafes can be better imagined than described, but they gave a stranger a good idea of the nature of a Paris mob when blood is in the air." By 5.45 all was ready. Delbler, the executioner, tested the knife and found it was moving easily in the grooves. Outside the place, in the direction of the Boulevard Voltaire, there were about 500 spectators, who could hardly see auything of the proceedings, but who were attracted to the spot and remained there out of sheer morbid curiosity. In the main this crowd was composed of those scoundrels who pray upon fallen women, convicts, gambling club croupiers of the lowest lass and girls who form the dregs of society. At 6.45 A.M. a party of officials, in company with the Governor of La Rouquette.

entered the cell occupied by Evrand They found Eyraud sitting crouched on his bed. When informed that the petition for On Shanghaihis pardon had been rejected, Eyraud replied 'Very well,' The condemned man and changed his trousers and socks, refus Being neked if he had any statement to make, the murderer replied in the negative. Abbe Faure then approached the guilty man and offered to receive and convey to Evraud's wife and daughter any measage which he might wish taken to them. To that I bid them adlou and hope they may Abbe Faure then again offered Egrand glass of cogneo, but he pushed it to one side, swing, No; that will do me no good, He refused prayer or any religious consolation. Evraud then walked with the chief warden and jailer into the dressing-room. He looked attentively at the gentlemen there present and did not utter a word. He sat down while Deibler pinioned him.

During this part of the preparation for the guillotine Eyrand turned to the London optional Hamburg, 473 pkgs. Mer-Governor and said . "May I request that my body should not be given to the surplied: Your body will be given to your family.' Eyrand thanked the Albe, the murderer's wife and child for him Eyraud, gazing at the faces around him then angrily exclaimed : 'Constans, Minister of the Interior, was right. He has won his case. Now he has his prize; "He will be to-night with Gabrielle. What grand

Suddenly, as Deibler was completing the task of pinioning him. Evraud continued You are hurting my finger, and, turning to the hesistant who was tving the bandage he said impatiently, 'Dan't pinch me so to him, and was afterwards rigidly silent everything, right and left, and then fixed is eyes upon the guillotine. Arrived at the foot of the guillotine, and within a few feet of the block, Eyraud cluded the exceptioners for a moment and loudly and angrily shouled to the assembled crowd : 'Constace is a murderer : he is more of a murderer than I am. Constant

Before he could complete the hantence the executioners seized the murderer and threw him upon the inclined plank of the guilloting. Deibler pressed the fatal knob and the flashing blade fell with a sharp, sliding sound, and the head of Gonffe's assault rolled into the basket below. Eyrand's body was then lifted into a wagon and Abbe Faure followed the body in a cab. turned over to the dead man's relatives. Immediately after the execution the mob made a wild rush toward the guillotine. and with difficulty was repulsed by a strong force of mounted guards that had been left in charge of that instrument of execution. Gabrielle Bompard, when informed of Eyraud's death, exclaimed 'C'est fini !! She cried a vaterically. She will be conveved to Clermont and kept in solitary confinement till the birth of her child, when she will be transferred to the department of high-class needlework.
